

Adam Calvert*Roving instructor*

Adam Calvert is one of the country's most successful shooting coaches, offering bespoke tuition on the clay ground and in the field. Formerly director of shooting at E.J. Churchill, Adam also has a reputation as a master gunfitter and believes good gunfit and a consistent gunmount is crucial to performance. Instructing for around 90 days per year in the field, Adam tailors his teaching style to the quarry the client is shooting. He says: "A shooter on a grouse day is likely to use a different method from when he is shooting a high pheasant." Grouse shooters will enjoy his 30-acre simulated grouse layout at Haydon Farm in Wiltshire which features four grouse butts and enables his clients to shoot anything from single birds to packs of six in front and behind. Adam also instructs clients to shoot overseas and tackle quarry such as partridges in Spain and doves in Argentina.
